Do you have an ex-partner?

Did you have a partner when you were employed by your former employer? And did your relationship end during or after your employment?

Then your ex-partner may be entitled to part of your pension. For this reason, we kindly ask you to also give us the date the relationship ended.

This may be an ex-partner due to:

- divorce;
- termination of a civil partnership; or
- termination of a joint household, if:
 - you and the person with whom you lived together were unmarried and not in a civil partnership;
 - you were not blood relatives or related directly; and
 - you were registered at the same address in the municipal personal records database (GBA) for at least six months, or had entered into a cohabitation agreement in the form of a notarized deed covering some financial matters.

Yes, I ended one or more relationships as described above during or after my employment with my former employer.
